THE PROBLEM

After matriculation, what do I do???

Many paths

Majors, careers, and study paths arrive without much structure.

Mixed advice

Friends and family care deeply, but may bring different expectations or limited career knowledge.

Fear of choosing wrong

Students must make important decisions before they feel confident about which path fits them.

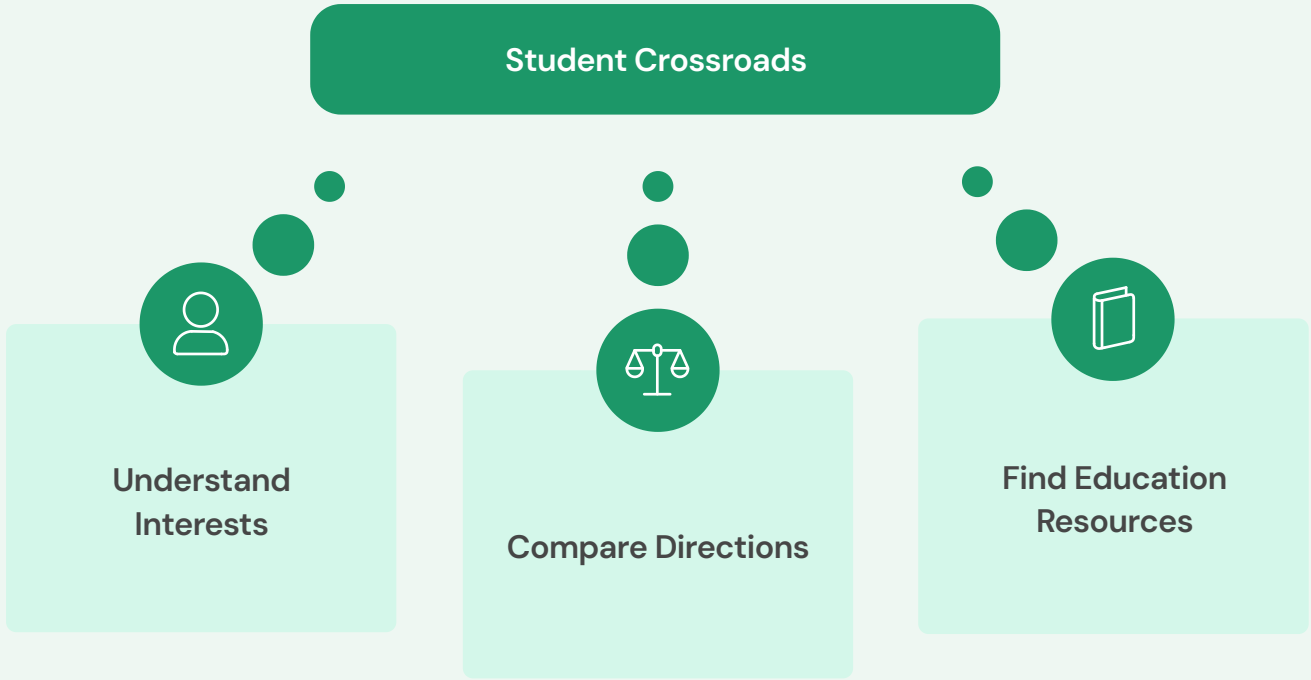

Made with GAMMA

WHO WE START WITH

For students who are what comes next.

Our primary audience is students in Myanmar who have recently completed matriculation examinations.

Verified starting segment

GED and IGCSE students are potential future audiences.

From “What should I do?” to “What can I try next?”

A simple journey from self-discovery to real-world exploration.

1 Discover your interests

Answer guided questions about preferences and interests.

2 Reflect on possible directions

See interest-based suggestions and consider careers worth exploring.

3 Explore learning resources

Browse related courses and review course details.

4 Choose a small next step

Record interest in a course or review available advisor information.

The goal

Not to decide a student's entire future—but to help them identify one direction worth investigating.

SUSTAINABILITY

From career exploration to learning opportunities.

Our proposed model: education providers could pay Wayfinder a commission when a referred student purchases a course.

What the prototype does today

01 Explore

Students discover possible career directions

02 Find courses

Students browse example learning resources

03 Show interest

Wayfinder records interest and links to providers

FUTURE REVENUE HYPOTHESIS

Referral commission

A participating provider pays a commission on a verified course sale referred by Wayfinder.

What we still need to prove - Real provider partnerships, student affordability, sales attribution, and willingness to pay commissions.

Current course and provider listings are fictional demo data. No verified sales, commissions, or provider agreements established.
